

Dear Bitu,

I've been thinking a lot lately about that time in my life when everything felt like it was falling apart, and I realized I never properly thanked you for being there for me. You probably remember when I went through my first real breakup. I thought I was going to marry that guy. When we ended things, I genuinely felt like my entire future had just disappeared overnight.

What you did for me during those months was nothing short of incredible. You were there every single second. I mean that literally. You answered my phone calls at two in the morning when I couldn't sleep. You sat with me while I cried for hours. You listened to me repeat the same stories and questions over and over again without ever making me feel like I was being too much. You brought me food when I forgot to eat. You made me laugh when I thought I'd never smile again.

The thing is, you didn't just keep me company. You helped me see that this wasn't the end of my story. You reminded me who I was before him, and you helped me believe I could be okay without him. You turned what could have been the most devastating experience of my life into something I could actually survive and grow from.

I'm doing really well now. I have a full life with work I'm excited about and friendships that mean everything to me. When I look back on that period, I don't just remember the pain anymore. I remember your kindness, your patience, and your unwavering support. You showed me what real friendship looks like, and I carry that with me every day.

Thank you for being the person who made that impossible time bearable. I will never forget what you did for me.

With all my love and gratitude,

Your friend
